After years of ongoing experimenting with breeding, we decided to add our Lemonpaya to the cross of Lemon Cherry Gelato and Runtz. The result was a plant with exceptional characteristics that we really wanted to preserve and stabilize: exceptional vigor, stress resistance, and beautiful structure. This is how Lemon Cherry Runtz was born. From the earliest stages of growth, this strain shows off its genetic stability with fast, uniform development and a strong, upright bushy structure making her a great choice for large scale grow operations where you absolutely need consistent reliability and speed. She is resilient and thrives under heat and fluctuating conditions: a solid choice for growers of all experience levels, including first time home growers. She responds extremely well to early training and defoliation, especially during veg, where proper airflow and light penetration unlock rapid vertical and lateral expansion. During flowering, Lemon Cherry Runtz begins to flex her true potential: heavy, resinous colas stack tightly from bottom to top with thick and dense buds, making for a highly productive and visually striking bush. With cooler finishing temperatures, she reveals a dramatic fade in her fan leaves, shifting into deep violet and cherry-purple hues that elevate her visual appeal to another level. To bring out the best in her, we recommend light to moderate feeding and consistent irrigation to runoff, making sure the water pH is soft, and stopping defoliation after the 3rd week of flowering to enhance bud production. To get the optimum results, harvest her at 30% of amber trichomes: this way you'll be able to explore her rich terpene profile to the fullest and preserve every bit of her flavor. Lemon Cherry Runtz is one of the most complete strains in our collection to date: an easy-to-run, high-reward variety that shines equally well in personal tents and scaled-up grows.
